To be clear, this is not a superficial course. This is for people who are sincere in their desire to go deeper into a sense of belonging beyond the material world. This is also not a camping trip – we will return home at the end of the evening so that you can get a good night's rest!

Learning Outcomes:

- Methods for fostering inclusive dialogue that generate belonging beyond the human element.
- The ability to connect current business practises to the impacts they have on the environment.
- Identify traditional business systems and processes that work against the environment.
- Connecting belonging to the individual in the context of the ensouled wilderness.
- Experience with circular dialogue discussion practice.
- Connecting personal wellbeing to the environment.
- Exploring tangible outcomes for Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR).
- Awareness of LEAN operations practices and waste elimination principles.
- Introduction to establishing an eco-conscious supply chain.
- Tools to move towards the complexity in living systems.

“Do unto those downstream as you would have those upstream do unto you.”

– Wendell Berry

How Participants will be Evaluated:

- Ability to identify connections between the participant's actions and the real impacts on the environment locally and regionally.
- Ability to cultivate inclusive dialogue and language that link the participant's organization and the environment.
- Whether there is heartfelt investment in the group activities.
- There will be discussion topics and application activities. Participants will be expected to complete their assignments and show up to the following class prepared to share.
